Measles, the Border and Disneyland

Cases of measles including four in Pinal County have been traced to the Disneyland theme park in Anaheim, Calif. Republicans like Rush Limbaugh and Congressman Mo Brooks of Alabama have suggested that "illegal aliens" are the cause. Possible presidential candidate Dr. Ben Carson has also blamed undocumented immigrants for the outbreak. In Arizona, Pinal County Attorney Lando Voyles told a State Senate panel on Wednesday that he knows how the measles outbreak got into Arizona and his county; it's from having an open border with Mexico.

A report on KFYI radio quoted Voyles as saying, "No one has even brought up the point that we've opened the border." "For years we had measles completely contained here in the US." Now Voyles is not just an attorney, he is an epidemiologist, either that or he stayed at a Holiday Inn Express, probably at tax payer's expense.

It is no surprise that Voyles is speaking out against the "porous border" after all that is what his mentor and running partner does on a regular basis. Yes, lets face it people, Voyles wouldn't have been elected without Sheriff Babeu and his political base. Now he is following Babeu's lead. We all know how the sheriff feels about the border and undocumented immigrants. We saw his true colors last year when he helped organize a protest of unaccompanied Central American immigrant minors along with his Tea Party, nativist and border militia followers. They were crying out that these kids were dangerous gang members and bringing in infectious diseases. None of which turned out to be true.

Apparently it was easier to demonize immigrants rather than sort out the facts which included that the vast majority of the people who contracted and spread the measles were not vaccinated. Another fact Voyles should have considered is that Mexico and Central America have a higher success rate of immunization than the United States. Considering over 50 million foreign tourists from all over the world visit the United States each year and it appears one of them may have been infected with measles and visited Disneyland, there is no need to point your finger at the border for blame.

Then of course we know what the first thing undocumented Mexicans do after crossing the border. The inquiring reporter says, "Hey Jesús, you just entered the US illegally, walked a hundred miles through the desert in 100 degree heat, avoided the border patrol, armed border militia groups, and Joe Arpaio what are you going to do next?" Jesús answers, "Hey, I'm going to Disneyland!"

One of the most popular rides at Disneyland and all of the Disney parks is the boat ride "It's a Small World". The

Resolution Copper hosts open house

By Mila Besich-Lira
Superior Sun

Resolution Copper held its first project update for 2015 last week. The open house was held at the Superior Junior Senior High Multipurpose Room and was well attended by supporters, opposition and those just wanting to learn about the project.

In the last few months of the year, the company accomplished many milestones that they had been working towards. Completion of the construction of the number 10 shaft was one of the major accomplishments and project managers for shaft development explained that now that it is complete they will begin to work to build the tunnel from number 10 shaft to number 9 shaft then eventually construct the number 9 shaft to be as deep as the number 10 shaft.

Another milestone completed in 2014 was the announcement from Tonto National Forest that the Mine Plan of Operations was declared complete. Once the mine plan of operations was declared complete, the Tonto National Forest is able to hire a third party to complete the NEPA process.

The third milestone for the project included the passage of the Southeast Arizona Land Exchange and Conservation Act by Congress in December. This particular milestone has been one the company and its supporters have been working to complete for 12 years. The passage of the land exchange has brought much attention to the project and to Superior as opposition groups have expressed their concern over the exchange.

Following the presentation the company opened the meeting to the public for questions. One question that came from the opposition was the concerns for the San Carlos Apaches. The man's concern was that the Apaches were not given enough opportunity to weigh in on the project and the exchange.

Tera Kitcheyan, a Native American Advisor in the Communications department of Resolution, answered the question. She introduced herself in her native Apache language and announced her family members. This is a tradition of the Apaches when speaking.

In her response to the question she explained that she did not take her position with the company lightly. She sought the advice of her elders and family before taking the position. She spoke of the many social struggles plaguing the reservation such as domestic violence and drugs. She explained that many of members of the tribe want to see these jobs available so they can be self sufficient. Editor's Note: Those attending the Resolution Copper open house in opposition of the mine announced the Save Oak Flats rally and march from San Carlos to Oak Flats over the weekend. The Superior Sun attempted to cover the event however was told that no photos could be taken of the rally. Facebook posts from those attending the event had photos of the event.

Little League registration in full swing

CVRMC celebrates groundbreaking for new expansion

By Andrea Justice
Copper Area News

With a ceremonial shovel of dirt Cobre Valley Regional Medical Center celebrated the future of health care in the Copper Corridor on Thursday, Feb. 5, 2015.

CVRMC welcomed over 300 community members from Globe, Miami, San Carlos, Roosevelt, Superior, Kearny, Winkelman, Hayden, and Young to witness the groundbreaking for CVRMC's new expansion project. The expansion will include a new Family Birth Center, along with new Med/Surg rooms, a Cath Lab, and a pharmacy.

CVRMC's Evelyn Vargas welcomed the crowd. "Today marks the beginning of a new age of health care in our region," said Vargas. Copper painted shovels were presented to community groundbreakers by the directors, managers and support staff of CVRMC. Those receiving a shovel included varies companies from around the Copper Corridor, the Cattle Growers Association, educators, fire personnel, emergency medical services, air and ground ambulance services, county health, police, sheriff, city and town leaders, nursing facilities, spiritual leaders, medical board of directors, volunteers and the media.

Chief Executive Officer of CVRMC Neal Jensen also addressed the crowd. "It is with gratitude that I stand here today as we embark on a major expansion to bring each of you, our families, friends and neighbors a patient-centered health care facility," said Jensen. "Today marks the beginning of a new physical structure for our medical center but you will continue to see and feel the same excellent care from our team of dedicated physicians, nurses, technicians and staff who are working every day to provide compassionate, high quality care."

Officials use the special ceremonial golden shovels to break ground at the Cobre Valley Regional Medical Center for their new expansion.

LDS youth serve in Superior

By Mila Besich-Lira
Superior Sun

Three hundred fifty-six youth members of the Gilbert Highland West Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints Stake visited Superior for a weekend retreat which included volunteer service at the cemetery in Superior. The students had two hours of service where they helped to remove weeds and paint the veterans memorial.

The retreat was hosted at the old high school. Following their community service project the students heard a motivational presentation from LDS Missionary Travis Tuttle who was one of two missionaries who were kidnapped in Russia. The movie The Saratov Approach tells the story of the two and how they got through the kidnapping.
