Memorial Day Tribute: Lest We Forget

By John Hernandez
Copper Area News

During war times, small town America has always answered the call to duty. Many of their young men have been killed in action. One of the most extraordinary sacrifices by a small town in America happened during World War II. In the farming town of Bedford, Virginia, population 3,000, 38 young men had joined Company A in the National Guard. Most had joined during and in the years following the Depression for the $1 a day pay, not anticipating that they would go to war. At the outbreak of the war, they were called to active duty.

On D-Day June 6, 1944, 28 of the 38 sons of Bedford participated in the mass invasion of Normandy, France which would mark the beginning of the end of the war in Europe. On that day 22 of those men would die on Omaha Beach. Most of them were killed in the first minutes of the landing. It was the highest per capita D-Day loss in the nation suffered by one community.

The survivors and the 10 men who joined the fighting a few days later would continue fighting until the war's end. They returned home, some of them physically wounded and most of them scarred emotionally and mentally by their war experiences. Their stories and the stories of their mothers, fathers, wives, friends, family, small town life and sacrifice are told in the book The Bedford Boys: One American Town's Ultimate D-Day Sacrifice by Alex Kershaw.

Two sets of brothers, Bedford and Raymond Hoback and Earl and Joseph Parker were among those killed that bloody morning. Their story along with D-Day, the Omaha Beach landing and the Bedford boys is the history that the acclaimed movie Saving Private Ryan is based. Director of the movie Steven Spielberg would donate a large sum to the construction of a National D-Day Memorial located in Bedford, Virginia which opened in 2001.

The National D-Day Memorial honors those brave men who participated in the invasion and the 4,413 Allied soldiers who died that day in the vicious fighting to secure the beachhead.

On this Memorial Day, we honor those men who once lived in the small mining and ranching communities along the Copper Corridor and made the ultimate sacrifice for their country. May we never forget.

The names were gathered from the internet and community memorials. Where more information was available, it was listed. World War II Army dead were the hardest to find. We apologize if we have left anyone out. We would like to learn their names from family, veteran organizations or friends, so they can be honored. If you have names for us to add to these, please email them to editor@

MVS students speak at Tucson Cactus and Succulent Society

(Tucson) Brianna Gallego, Madison Nevitt, and Mia Villa were invited to the monthly board meeting of the Tucson Cactus and Succulent Society (TCSS) to present their SARSEF project "Super Pie".

This project involved using desert ingredients: prickly pear cactus fruit, barrel cactus fruit, cholla fruit, hackberries, and manzanita berries to prepare, cook, and provide taste testing at our school. Their pie required 4 test trials before it was a delicious, nutritious, and organic native pie. There was an abundant amount of nutrients in their pie and during the process, they learned so much about our desert environment now and in the past through field trips to the Arizona Trail, Mission Gardens, and the Old Pueblo Archaeological Society.

Jazlyn Ellis represented the other project "Cactus Transpiration". She told about how it is important to learn about desert plants so we can learn to adapt to climate change. She explained that desert cactus transpire at night and survive on a CO₂ acid that's formed inside the cactus during the day. These special plants only breath through their stomata at night so they can conserve as much moisture as possible. She was excited to see that the Biosphere2 is performing experiments on transpiration to see if plant transpiration can cool down the heat generated by solar panels (Edible Baja Arizona Magazine).

The students had their first public speaking appearance with 200 members of the TCSS in attendance. They were in some great company with the 2nd place winner and another honorable mention winner. They were excited when the TCSS gave them some cactus and succulent cuttings to take home.
