LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Non-profits depend on RICO funds

As a co-founder with Carmen Auza and sitting President for eleven years of Pinal Council for CASA//Foster, Inc. (PCCI) I would like to comment on our Pinal County Supervisors position and comments on RICO money being used to assist non-profit organizations involving children/youth in our County. Although I resigned my position only this year to commit myself completely to my work with foster children/youth on W6 Ranch Counseling Services, I remain a strong supporter of this worthwhile organization.

RICO money donated to PCCI over the years by Sheriff Paul was used to pay for tutoring for Pinal County foster children/youth. A large percentage of the children in the foster care system are behind in school because of abuse, poor attendance, lack of follow through with homework, poor parent participation and frequent moves within the foster care system. Sylvan offers a reduced rate to PCCI for foster children, which has enabled PCCI to serve more children.

It's not unusual to see a 8th grade foster student on a first grade level. PCCI collaborated with Sylvan Learning Center and to make a long-term difference in these children's lives. With the help of RICO funds, these children hopefully will move on to become successful and productive, tax paying members of our society. Our State Officials see tutoring as a luxury and does not provide funding for foster children even though they are considered Wards of the State.

Other RICO funds were used to help support continuing education for students who aged out of the foster care system and would be left on the streets to survive anyway they possibly could. With the help of PCSO and RICO funds numerous students were able to continue onto college and also will become productive members of our society. If we can mitigate crime by educating our foster students/teens then we are in fact, saving money in the future by their not having to resort to a life of crime to survive.

I agree with our Sheriff that it's a "moral obligation" to give money to youth organization so children/youth have access to positive activities that keep them out of trouble and tutoring to help them succeed academically.

Supervisor Pete Rios - What higher priority can we have in Pinal County than the future of our children/youth? With a little assistance from RICO funds they can have tutoring and a positive influence and guidance through non-profit organizations throughout the County. Kudos to our Sheriff for caring about them!

I read the daily newspaper and have seen numerous articles where our Sheriff has purchased surveillance equipment, handguns and tasers, and other devices needed for his Deputies from RICO funds when actually the County Supervisors should be sharpening their pencils and finding the funds to support items needed for our protections and safety in Pinal County. More Deputies on the streets is always good but what about the equipment they need to do their job. It's unfortunate that so much time is spent arguing with the Sheriff and County Attorney about the way they disburse funds. Why not do your job and allow them to do theirs!?

For families on the move, Common Core is key

Arizona's College and Career Ready Standards help ensure all students are prepared for a successful future beyond graduation. These stronger standards will help Arizona build a more qualified workforce and will lead to a more prosperous future for Arizona's businesses and economy. I'd like to offer yet another reason though for Arizona needs College and Career Ready Standards: children in military families will benefit vastly from these standards.

Arizona is home to seven military bases, and each one has approximately five to six thousand military personnel. These troops and their families are a large part of our state's fabric, and have been for generations. For families that relocate to a new base, which military families do as often as every two to three years, children are expected to make new friends, navigate new neighborhoods, develop new daily routines and adapt to new environments. As an "Army brat" this was very much my story. As an example, in the 6th grade, I attended school in Massachusetts, Texas and Panama. Mission requirements, however, should not require children of military members to experience gaps in their education.

Strengthening Arizona's academic standards is far from an issue that only impacts military families, or even the millions of other Americans who move from one state or school district to another every year. For too many years, Arizona has not provided the quality education needed to help prepare students to thrive in today's economy. Twenty-three percent of Arizona students do not graduate from high school on time, and of those who do, many are not ready to enter college or the workplace—or to qualify for the privilege to serve in our Armed Services.

As a 22-year veteran of the US Air Force and now as the President of the Oracle Elementary School District Governing Board, I can personally attest to the critical importance of the standards. I've witnessed firsthand the worthwhile investment in time and resources our administrators and teachers are making into aligning curriculum, selecting textbooks and classroom materials. Thanks to the efforts of our amazing educators, we are now beginning to see the difference that the new standards are making in improving student learning.

Arizona's College and Career Ready Standards are ensuring that our children in military families and beyond are receiving a high quality education. They are better preparing our students for college, career and life by helping them develop critical thinking and real-world problem solving skills. They also allow parents, students and teachers to be on the same page and set high expectations for student learning. As a leader in the Air Force, it was often my experience that high expectations produced better results. I suspect our children will rise to the occasion as well, and all of us will be the better for it.

Pinal and Gila counties may go separate ways on tailoring

Since 2000 Pinal has grown more urban while Gila remained rural, creating different job program needs

By James J. Hodl
Copper Area News Publishers

After nearly 15 years, the Pinal County Board of Supervisors appears poised to end its partnership with Gila County in conducting jobs programs under the US Workforce Investment Act (WIA).

Executives in both counties are resigned to the decoupling as the two counties have grown apart since the partnership was established in July 2000, with Pinal growing increasing suburban with population densities in its northern and western regions increasing while Gila has remained rural. As a result both now have different needs when it comes to tailoring programs to find employment for their residents and training citizens in skills required for available or future jobs.

The current WIA partnership agreement runs until July 1, 2015. During the interim, Pinal County is looking to realign with the primarily urban Maricopa County while Gila may seek to partner with another county closer to its rural makeup.

At 88,000 San Tan Valley itself has more residents than all of Gila County, while Casa Grande with about 50,000 residents is almost equal with Gila.

How the breakup will affect the Central Arizona Association of Governments (CAAG), under which the two counties partnered on WIA programs, is not known. A CAAG spokesman said it is likely that the two counties will continue to work through CAAG on economic development, transportation and environmental (mostly related to water and sewage) issues but not workforce issues.

“The reason we decided to end our WIA partnership with Gila County is simply that we are no longer a match,” said Anthony Smith, chairman of the Pinal County Board of Supervisors. “When we first entered the partnership, we were both rural counties. But that was before the fantastic development and growth in population around San Tan Valley and Maricopa. Now the north and west sides of Pinal County are more like Maricopa County than Gila County.”

Tim Kanavel, manager of the Pinal County Economic Development Program, was more succinct, noting, “Remember the people you knew in elementary school and met years later and found you no longer had much in common? That’s what happened to Pinal and Gila.”

In decoupling its WIA partnership with Gila County, Smith said the Pinal Board of Supervisors considered several options. These included going it alone on its WIA programs, re-partnering with Gila under a different management structure, or coupling with either Pima or Maricopa County. Maricopa seemed the best alternative considering Pinal’s high growth areas border it.

The areas around San Tan Valley and Maricopa are already aligned with the Maricopa County through federally-funded transportation programs administered by the Maricopa Association of Governments while the rest of Pinal County has these programs administered through CAAG.

WIA programs in Maricopa County are administered by the Maricopa Workforce Connection, a unit of the Maricopa County Human Services Agency. Representatives of Pinal County government have already visited Connection offices to discuss a partnership but no formal agreements have been reached as yet, said Patricia Wallace, Connection assistant director.

The Gila County Board of Supervisors is resigned to the WIA partnership breaking up next year.

“We’d like to continue to work with Pinal County on employment programs but we are not positive the partnership will run past July 2015,” said Melissa Buzan, director of Gila County Community Services.

“Since 2000, the partnership has resulted in much progress being made in attracting jobs and training local residents to perform them. Hopefully Gila County can carry on serving the employment and training needs for our rural citizens,” Buzan said.

By decoupling with Gila County and perhaps couple with Maricopa County, Pinal County can do a better job of attracting the type of jobs the county’s growing population need, Kanavel said.

“In 2000 Pinal and Gila had equal populations, but now Pinal has over 400,000 residents while Gila County has only 52,000 residents and shrinking,” he noted. At 88,000 San Tan Valley itself has more residents than all of Gila County, while Casa Grande with about 50,000 residents is almost equal with Gila.

“Most of jobs being created in Gila are in tourism and mining, but Pinal is pursuing job-creating companies involved in high-tech, manufacturing and distribution. We have radically different workforce needs,” Kanavel added.

As an example of the businesses being attracted to Pinal County, he cited the distribution warehouse of The Tractor Supply Co. near Coolidge. The company has nearly a page of job openings at that warehouse ranging from dock workers to inventory managers on its website.

The county also is making a bid to attract the Tesla

Anthony Smith

Tim Kanavel

Motors lithium battery factory to a site in the center of the county, he said. To further boost employment opportunities, Pinal is looking into creating a free trade zone to attract foreign businesses.

“That is something we wouldn’t have attempted a few years ago, but it feels good to be able to compete with larger counties around the country for these jobs,” Kanavel said.

Kanavel sees the switch in emphasis on the WIA program to benefit all sectors of the county, including those in the southeastern corner of the county hit hard by the closing of local mines.

Communities like Oracle and San Manuel still have populations that include residents who are of working age but have to drive toward Tucson to find gainful employment. By attracting new employers into Pinal County and having the ability to train them to meet the needs of these employers, these residents can work closer to home and have shorter commutes. And the availability of those new jobs also will attract new residents to these communities, reversing population declines and boosting their local economies, creating still more jobs, he noted.

“Sounds like something we can really use around here,” said Linda Lee, an employee at the San Manuel Library on hearing of the county’s plans.

During its years of operations, the Pinal/Gila partnership on WIA programs has faithfully fulfilled its mission, said Smith. Many displaced workers and new arrivals have found employment through the One-Stop Centers in each county (Casa Grande in Pinal and Globe in Gila). Thousands of workers also have been retrained for new jobs in both counties through a partnership with Central Arizona College.

The dissolution on the WIA partnership under CAAG would not be the first program loss for that governmental workforce programs for their residents

body. In 2010 the Sun Corridor Metropolitan Planning Organization was carved out of a section of Pinal County around Casa Grande, Coolidge and Eloy and took over local transportation planning services. Since then the organization of drafted plans for highway improvements through the area, including I-8 and I-10 and the future I-11. The organization also is working on improvements in railroad logistics to better serve the growth in industry planned by Pinal County in that region.

But CAAG has many accomplishments in other areas. These include creation of a revolving loan fund to help businesses relocate into Pinal and Gila. In a partnership with Digital Arizona, rural Internet broadband has been improved to provide faster speeds with greater reliability. CAAG also oversaw planning and improvements of the wastewater management systems in Gold Canyon and Marana. The latter is a joint project with Pima County, near whose border Marana sits.

What the Workforce Investment Act does to reduce unemployment Enacted by the US Congress in 1998, the Workforce Investment Act (WIA) is targeted toward reducing unemployment by helping all type of workers find jobs befitting their skills or get them training to qualify for jobs available in their community. Although funded on the national level, WIA programs are administered by the states through local agencies such as Central Arizona Governments, the agency created through the partnership of Pinal and Gila Counties.

Nationwide the WIA program provides job training to economically disadvantaged adults and youth, while providing employers with a workforce trained through community colleges, vocational schools, on-the-job training (OJT), and work experience. Key elements to the WIA program are community linkages, individualized training, and service placement. Eligible participants have the opportunity to enhance their employability to compete for the jobs and meet the current needs of the local labor market. These include:

- Individualized case management/career planning to provide job development and job placement.

- One-Stop Centers provide fully equipped resource room for job search activities (telephone for making appointments, computers for completing resumes and employment applications, access to local, state and county job banks, etc.).
- Assessment testing – vocational aptitude and ability testing to assist in career decision making and for training/employment matches.
- Job search and self-sufficiency workshops to produce skills and job search and job retention.
- Basic education and GED preparation – computerized academic training through open entry/open exit classes based on individual need.
- Applicable support services (work clothing, child care, transportation needs, medical/dental/vision needs, etc.).

A key feature of WIA is the One-Stop Delivery System for workforce investment activities. This is Acosta family celebrates the graduation of Joanna from the University of Arizona.

Local girl makes her parents proud

By Rene Acosta

San Manuel - In May 1977, Rene Acosta and Margarita Acosta brought their three young children to San Manuel with absolutely nothing but their desire to live the American Dream.

They gave up the little they had in Mexico and traveled to San Manuel looking for work at the Magma Copper Mine. It was a big risk because nothing was guaranteed, but, the opportunity was there. Little did they know that their risk and their values would expand their family to five children who would all grow up and graduate from major universities, become professionals, would have four service members in their family, a doctor, three son-in-laws, two daughter-in-laws and 12 grandchildren.

This story is told by the Acosta's children. We share our story not to boast, but, to inspire and celebrate our parents, and the American Dream. As a family, we are proud U.S. citizens and, also, very proud of our heritage as Latinos. We hope to touch and inspire those chasing a dream, those battling adversity; validate and share our values, and, inspire immigrants in hope of a better life.

Rene and Margarita Acosta were married at 17 and 15 years old, respectively. They had a very challenging and poor upbringing in Sonora, Mexico with Rene forced to work at the age of six to support his large family. Together, they have experienced several trials in their life, including tough jobs in the farm fields, the loss of their first child, financial troubles, marital woes, teenage pregnancy, language and cultural barriers. They have always overcome those trials with very simple, concrete values and principles.

Those basic values include the love instilled in their family, happiness, faith in God through Jesus Christ, hard work, pride, education and taking advantage of the opportunities offered by this great country. Rene and Margarita came to the U.S. with many dreams. One of those dreams was that their children would have a better life than them and that they would all become professionals.

On May 17, their dream was finally realized with the graduation of their youngest daughter Joanna as a Biomedical Engineer from the University of Arizona. Joanna will be married to Rulon Austin and begin her engineering career at ASARCO this summer. Joanna will join her four older siblings as professionals all with University degrees.

The Acosta's oldest child, Veronica Santiago, is married to Joe Santiago. Both are Army veterans and

More postseason awards for Copper Corridor trio

By Andrew Luberda
Copper Area News

Two softball players and a baseball player from Copper Corridor high schools have been named Section Players of the Year by the AIA. San Manuel's Lyana Waddell and Ray's Stormee Galka were named Section VI Softball Co-Players of the Year. The Miners' Shane Kelly earned Section VI Player of the Year honors in baseball. The trio previously earned All-Section recognition.

Waddell, a sophomore, is the ace pitcher of the Miners' back-to-back State Championship team. She finished the season with a record of 27-2, including a win in the championship game. She made 31 appearances this year, recorded 13 complete game shutouts, pitched 167-1/3 innings, and posted a 1.51 ERA. Lyana was an offensive threat as well, hitting .317 with 21 RBI. She had eight extra-base hits, including five doubles, two triples, and a homerun.

Galka, also a sophomore, did it all for the Bearcats' softball team. She was the ace of the pitching staff, going 18 - 7 with a 1.01 ERA. She made 26 appearances, recorded two complete game shutouts, and pitched 145-1/3 innings. As good as Stormee was on the mound, she was even better at the plate. She hit .538 with a 1.518 OPS, .583 OBP, and .935 SLG. She had 50 hits, 35 RBI, and 20 extra-base hits, including 10 doubles, three triples, and seven homeruns. The Bearcats reached the semi-finals of the state tournament this year.

Kelly, a junior, is one of the top offensive players in the state, not just in his Division. He batted an astounding .645 with a 1.590 OPS, .708 OBP, and .881 SLG. Shane recorded 49 hits, 30 RBI, and 14 extra-base hits, including 11 doubles, 2 triples, and a homerun. Kelly was a perfect 26 for 26 in stolen bases on the season. He made four pitching appearances and recorded one win in nine innings pitched. He finished with a 0.78 ERA and nine strikeouts, averaging one strikeout for every inning pitched. This year, the Miners reached the semi-finals of the state tournament for the third straight season.

Living in a food desert

By John Hernandez
San Manuel Miner

Food deserts have been defined as areas that lack adequate access to affordable fresh fruits, vegetables, whole grains, low-fat milk and dairy products, and other foods that make up a healthy diet. This would include access to health food stores, organic and non-GMO (genetically modified organisms) foods. In cities research has shown that food deserts exist in areas where the consumer is one to 10 miles away from a supermarket. For many especially the poor and elderly being able to get to a supermarket can be a problem.

In rural areas such as the Tri-Community a food desert is classified as a county where residents must drive more than 10 miles to a supermarket or super center. Twenty percent of rural counties in the United States are considered food deserts including parts of Pinal County. Nearly 14 percent of Arizonans live in food deserts. Add to that the second highest poverty level in the United States (one in five Arizonans live under the poverty level) and eating healthy for the poor and elderly presents a number of challenges.

Lack of access and affordability to a variety of healthy food and fresh fruits and vegetables is a bigger problem in rural communities such as ours that lack a mass transit system. There are many people in the area living at or below the poverty level. Some of these families do not have a vehicle or someone that can drive them. A number of senior citizens no longer drive long distances or at all due to age and physical disabilities. If you live in the Tri-Community the nearest supermarket is Bashas' located in Catalina.

This is approximately a 28-mile one way drive from either Mammoth or San Manuel and 16 miles from Oracle. For those of us who still drive regularly, this does not present a problem, but for the poor and elderly it is a challenge and a burden.

The town of Oracle is lucky to have a market. This hometown

San Manuel Jr. High celebrates eighth grade promotion

By Nina Crowder
San Manuel Miner

In celebration and accomplishment for the San Manuel Jr. High schoolers the eighth grade promotion was held on May 21, 2014 in the high school auditorium. All the eighth graders were excited and proud of their accomplishments. Family and friends filled the auditorium as cameras were flashing when the students walked across the stage to receive awards and certificates of promotion making them officially ninth graders now!

Hannah Reidhead and Max Fisher were the recipients of the American Legion Awards, they were chosen as the outstanding boy and girl of their class. There were 12 students who received the President's Education Awards congratulations to the students who earned this award with a 3.5 GPA or higher. The educators of San Manuel High School couldn't be prouder of these young students who excel.

Denise Fisher said, "You have all made this my best year of teaching yet. So many of you have touched my heart, and even when I got mad at you, I couldn't stay mad for long. I hope that when you all graduate (from college!) that you get a job that doesn't seem like work; a job that you look forward to going to every day. That has been what my job was like this year, because of all of you. Thank you for making me laugh every day. Have a safe and fun summer, and please come visit me next year."

Students are encouraged by educators and parents to get involved in high school, involved students do much better in school. Parental support is very important and it is nice to live in a community where parents do care about their children.

A balance between celebrating a milestone and moving into high school is great achievement. These students are just beginning to understand the hard work that is going to be required of them in high school. Our hope for these students is that they excel in school and make their individual dreams come true. May the class of 2018 make all of us proud!

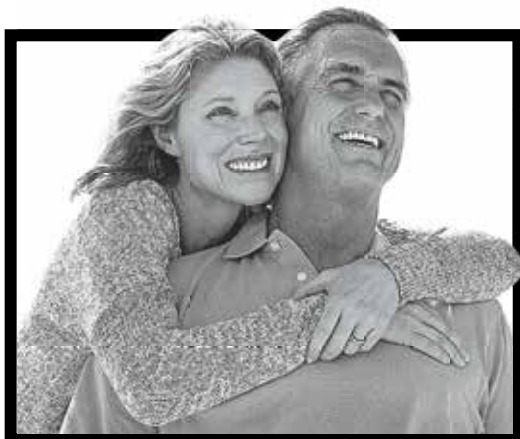

Hannah Reidhead and Max Fisher were honored by the American Legion. Denise Fisher | SMHS

County Attorney helps out Project Graduation

By John Hernandez
San Manuel Miner

"If it wasn't for you guys, we couldn't put this on." Voyles said, "These funds are crucial to our children." Fred Creeley thanked the county attorney for donating the RICO funds. Project Graduation was started 10 years ago after a high school student lost their life in an automobile accident on graduation night. The program is designed to allow graduates and their guests to have fun in a safe, alcohol and drug free environment. The students enjoy an overnight party at the Elks where they can win prizes including lap top computers and a car. During the 10 year period that the program has been operating, not one student has been involved in a serious car accident. Project Graduation has not only saved lives but it allows local law enforcement to patrol other areas where they are needed.

market provides some produce, low fat dairy products, whole grain breads, organic eggs and quality meats but realistically because of the small volume that they can purchase they cannot provide the quantity or variety of fresh produce or healthier foods that a supermarket or health food store can. In San Manuel and Mammoth some of the small convenience markets are trying to carry produce but it is not much of a variety and costs more. These markets are trying and we need to support them and buy locally as often as we can. There are some farmers markets springing up and they are carrying fresh produce including organically grown vegetables at affordable prices. However, they are not open every day and the supply is very limited.

Recent studies have shown a correlation between food availability and health. The elderly can have their health put at risk because of the lack of availability of a reliable and adequate source of fresh fruits and vegetables. The elderly have higher nutrient needs and cannot tolerate the higher salt and sugar content of processed foods. If they are already suffering from diabetes or chronic illnesses, these can be exacerbated by limited food choices. The health of many adults and children in the area is at risk. Inadequate diets are leading to an increase in obesity and related health problems such as diabetes and high blood pressure.

As you can see, living in a food desert especially in a rural area can be problematic. It can also impact our health. The problems of food deserts are being researched and programs are being initiated by the government and others to provide solutions to the challenges of living in a rural food desert.

a system where entities responsible for administering separate workforce investment, educational and other human resource programs and funding streams collaborate to create a seamless system of service delivery designed to enhance access to the programs' services and improve long-term employment outcomes for individuals receiving assistance. Besides adults, youths and dislocated workers, this system also serves the special needs of veterans, senior citizens and Native Americans; and oversee employment and training activities connected to the US Department of Urban Development and community services block grants.

Administration of WIA in Arizona is provided by the state Department of Economic Security (DES). Oversight functions include fiscal tracking, participant data tracking, reporting to the US Department of Labor, monitoring the Local Workforce Investment Areas and local service providers for compliance and quality issues, providing training and technical assistance to the system and policy interpretation and development.

Pursuant to federal law, 95 percent of WIA funds are allocated to Local Workforce Investment Areas, with the remaining 5 percent available for discretionary purposes such as administration, statewide initiatives, and competitive grants for employment and training programs.

Core WIA services overseen at the local level include:

- Determining eligibility to receive assistance under WIA Title I
- Outreach, intake and orientation to the information and other services available through the One-Stop delivery system
- Initial assessment of skill levels, aptitudes, abilities, and supportive service needs (child care and transportation and referral to other services as appropriate)

- Job search and placement assistance and where appropriate career counseling
- Provision of employment statistical information relating to the local, regional and national labor market areas and provision of performance information and cost information on eligible providers of training services, youth activities, adult education, post-secondary vocational education, vocational education activities available to school dropouts, and vocational rehabilitation, and
- Information regarding filing claims for unemployment compensation.

One-Stop Centers under the Pinal/Gila partnership are located in Casa Grande and Globe.

On May 21, bipartisan legislation was introduced in the US Senate to overhaul the WIA law. The Workforce Innovation and Opportunity Act (WIOA) of 2014 would both streamline and update the program. New standards for performance after training will be required. For instance, a person taking an adult literacy program under WIA will not be considered trained if he just learns to read. He must prove retention of information required to hold a job. More emphasis will be placed on securing employment for high school dropouts and disabled people.

States, which receive funding based largely on levels of unemployment, will also have to submit a strategic plan showing how they will coordinate training, education, and vocational rehabilitation (services for people with disabilities). The system will become more tailored to individuals, instead requiring that everyone follow a rigid "sequence of services" before they are trained. Bureaucratic rules for managing the program will be simplified.

Reay's raises a Million

Reay's Ranch Investors, owners of Super Stop and Minit Market convenience stores in Southern Arizona, held its 6th annual golf tournament in Tubac in April and raised more than $66,000. In six short years their golf tournaments have raised more than $324,000 for Arizona's Children Association (AzCA).

Since their fundraising efforts began in 2007, Reay's Ranch Investors has raised more than $1.05 million dollars for AzCA.

"With the awesome support of our customers, vendors and employees we're thrilled that AzCA can continue their mission of Protecting Children, Empowering Youth and Strengthening Families throughout Arizona," said Richard Couch, C.O.O of R.R.I

Arizona's Children Association was founded in 1912, as Arizona Children's Home Association, to care for homeless, neglected and dependent children.

For more than 100 years the agency has provided services to more than 42,000 children & families in all 15 Arizona counties each year. For more information about AzCA, visit their website at www.arizonaschildren.org.
