Friday Night at the Movies: Geronimo to be shown at the Oracle Community Center

Craig Anderson and the Oracle Community Center (OCC) are sponsoring a free Friday Night at the movies for adults on Friday, June 24, starting at 6 p.m. It would be appreciated if you could show up early to help set up and put away OCC chairs.

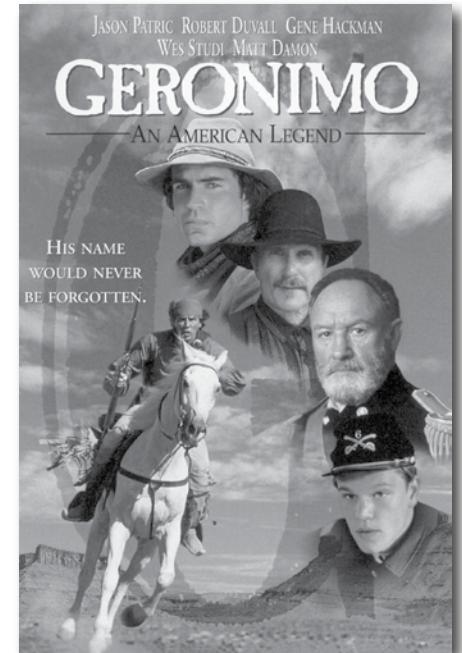

Bring your own snacks, drinks and a comfortable chair. The movie, 'Geronimo: An American Legend', two hours in length, stars Wes Studi, Matt Damon, Gene Hackman, Robert Duvall and Jason Patric. It was made in 1993, directed by Walter Hill and scored by Ry Cooder.

Wes Studi is well known as a Native American actor. So well known that Native American comedians often bring him up as the person most mentioned by white people when they are talking about Native Americans.

He is well known for the movie that is being presented but also for The Last of the Mohicans. While other roles and projects are lesser known, a quick look at his IMDb shows both a thriving acting career and a diversity to his interests, such as his writing and directing credits for 'Goodnight My Zombie', which can be found on YouTube at <https://youtu.be/tLPVFv16Aos>.

Gene Hackman has been an actor for approximately 60 years. If you are old enough to have watched a movie before 2006, you may or may not know his name, but you've probably encountered his face on a film near you. He's been in action films, comedies, westerns, mysteries and even children's movies. One movie he starred in, The French Connection, was released in 1971 and is still talked of today as both one of the best movies ever made. Gene Hackman is quite well known for being in the sort of movies that remain beloved.

Robert Duval is, perhaps, best known for the series Lonesome Dove. Or, since it was closer to the start of his career and is still watched, some might consider his role as Boo Radley in To Kill A Mockingbird as his finest moment. His career is relatively as lengthy and diverse as Gene Hackman's, and features such long-lived films as 'The Virginian' and television series as 'The Untouchables'.

Jason Patric is a little younger all told than the careers of either of the last two mentioned gentlemen and began his career at roughly the same time IMDb says Wes Studi began his. The most remembered and still watched film of his early career is probably The Lost Boys, which was released in 1987. By 1990, he was playing Lord Byron in Frankenstein Unbound, which borders on a cult classic. He's had a varied career of shorts, television roles and series, movies and at least one stab at producing; but we won't talk about that in polite company.

Matt Damon is Matt Damon. He buys zoos, raises foster children, downsizes to smaller than children and sciences the ... soil on Mars. The only thing Matt Damon doesn't do in a movie is play Mark Wahlberg. He is quite well known for the 1997 drama romance Good Will Hunting, as an actor and as a writer, and as part of the team of Matt Damon and Ben Affleck.

Geronimo: An American Legend is an R-rated movie. There is violence, racism and death. It is based on real life historical events, especially regarding the last great Apache leaders, especially

An Unseemly Killing

By John Hernandez
Special to the Miner

Earl Gardner was an Apache Indian raised on the San Carlos Apache Reservation. On Dec. 6, 1935, Gardner committed a heinous crime of murder when he used an ax to kill his wife, Alice Dia Gardner, age 20, and his 28-day-old son Edward. He told the Indian police officer Salvador Grant who he surrendered to that “I wasn’t drunk this time. I was just crazy. My wife wanted me to take care of the baby again while she went off to church.”

Gardner had been released from prison two years prior to the killing for the murder of another Apache, Francis Knight. He had stabbed Knight in what was described as a “drunken frenzy.”

He was taken to the Gila County Jail in Globe. FBI agents were sent to investigate as the crime was committed on the federal reservation at San Carlos.

A preliminary hearing was held on Dec. 20. Gardner tried to plead guilty and confessed to the crime, saying “I picked up a hatchet and I struck her on the right side, then on the left side. The baby was in my arms. I walk out of tent, put baby down and struck once. I never look at baby.

“I walk back in the tent and strike Alice in the head once more. Still got hatchet. Walk out. Threw it on the ground.” He then told the judge “I don’t care whether you hang me or not.”

Judge Albert Sames refused his guilty plea and had him bound over for trial. He was held without bond. The trial began on Jan. 20, 1936. The next day Gardner took the stand and again confessed to the crime and told the jury to vote the death penalty for him. After 26 hours of deliberation, jurors could not come to an agreement. Ten voted for guilty and the death penalty while two voted for guilty and life imprisonment. The judge ordered a new hearing.

At the second trial, after deliberating for 30 minutes, the jury found Gardner guilty of 1st degree murder without a mercy recommendation which made it automatic that the death penalty would be imposed. On Feb. 13, Judge Sames sentenced Gardner to be hanged by the neck until dead. When asked prior to sentencing if he had anything to say, Gardner answered “I want you to get a good strong rope and have this happen immediately.”

After exhausting all his appeals, a final execution date was set for July 14, 1936. Gardner would be the first Native American hanged in Arizona since 1925. The Federal government would have to build gallows on the reservation as Arizona had changed their method of execution to lethal gas following the botched hanging of Eva Dugan in 1933, in which the woman was decapitated. Prior to the hanging, rumors were being spread that an uprising by the Apaches may be attempted to stop the execution. Extra security methods were taken and the location of the hanging was kept secret. More than 30 special deputies made up of county sheriffs, experienced lawmen and even reporters were sworn in to guard the dam and scaffolding. Each deputy was armed with a rifle and pistol.

The execution was set for 5:30 a.m. At 11 p.m. the night before, Gardner was taken from the jail at Globe and driven to a location on the San Carlos reservation in a box canyon a half mile from the Coolidge Dam. It was there that Gardner sat in the backseat of a car for nearly five hours awaiting the time for his hanging. No invitations were issued to the execution. Guards were positioned on the dam and all the road entrances. No Indians were allowed to attend the hanging.

The crude makeshift gallows were built next to an old abandoned crusher. After Gardner mounted the steps and stood on the trap door, his arms and legs were buckled with straps and a black mask was placed over his head. After Gardner’s final words “It’s over, I’m glad it’s over. That’s all”, Marshall McKinney gave the signal to the executioner to release the trap.

When the trap was released, Gardner’s body fell through the opening but his arm hit the side of the trap causing him to swing and bang his head on the other side of the trap breaking his fall. This prevented the fall from breaking his neck and providing him with a quick death. Gardner’s body was swinging and he could be heard gasping for air. After five minutes, the doctor checked Gardner’s heart with his stethoscope. It was still beating. Gardner could be heard wheezing. Some of the guards became uneasy. Marshal McKinney walked out of the room a few deputies followed him to get fresh air. After 21 minutes a few deputies lifted up Gardner and adjusted his rope then dropped him a few feet. After 33 minutes struggling to breathe, Gardner was pronounced dead by Doctor Snyder.

The bungled hanging resulted in what newspapers called an agonizing death for Gardner. In 1937, the U.S. Congress created a law authorizing federal authorities to use state or local facilities to executed federal prisoners sentenced to death. In Arizona they could use the gas chamber at Arizona State Prison in Florence. Gardner would be the last Native American to be hanged in Arizona.

Good things coming soon to Oracle's Mountain Vista School

Parents take note: if your child attends school at Mountain Vista School in Oracle and loves to read – good things are coming!

Mountain Vista School is in the middle of a construction project that will help open the world for its young students.

Last year, the school demolished the aging Bateman Building to make way for new classroom space and a brand-new library. The whole community is waiting with bated breath to see what goodness is in store for MVS students.

Due to the construction, the Oracle School Board has been meeting in different locations around the campus and off campus. Because audience space is at a minimum, the school has continued hosting the meeting on Zoom as well as in person.

“Our school board typically meets the third Thursday of the month at 6 p.m.,” confirmed Superintendent Crystle Nehrmeier.

The June meeting, though, was rescheduled.

“We will meet Thursday, June 30, at 6 p.m.” Nehrmeier said. It’s been tentatively scheduled for the Oracle Community Center. “Our meeting agendas are posted at the Oracle Post Office, on our website at www.osd2.org, and outside the District Office at 2618 W El Paseo,” she added. The Zoom information will be provided on the meeting agenda as well as on the school Facebook page.

Nehrmeier said that once construction is complete, the board will begin meeting in the new library building – allowing parents and other taxpayers the chance to enjoy the space as well.

This construction is funded by the bond passed by voters in November 2019.
