The Concepts of Body Mechanics

nderstanding how our body and our opponent's body work is one way to define Body Mechanics. Actually it is far more complex than that. Elements of Physical Science, including concepts of the Fulcrum/ Lever; the Wedge; the Incline Plane; the Pulley and the Screw are required in order to grasp the importance of controlling, not only your own weight, balance, and power, but must include that of your adversary as well. It can certainly be difficult to maintain harmonious physical coordination while two people are engaged in combat. However, a fundamental knowledge of these basic principles will be necessary for a satisfactory outcome.

Concepts regarding the Fulcrum/Lever can include the arm and the leg, particularly the elbow and the knee. Since both joints only bend one way, applying a lock that counters the normal function of the limb will cause enough pain to complete a throw or a pin.

Concepts regarding the Wedge can be demonstrated by using the forearm or the elbow to create an opening between clinched bodies or limbs with sufficient space to escape a grip, or use the opening to maintain your own control.

Concepts regarding the Incline Plane are essential for performing leg sweeps, hip throws, shoulder throws, and "Mugger" throws. This principle includes the ability to leverage an opponent into a compromised position and much like a dump truck unloading its cargo, create Concepts regarding the Pullev can be experienced during an "Extension" throw or while doing many wrist locks or wrist throws. Sinew being stretched around joints pulls whatever it's attached to.

Concepts of the Screw are a vital part of any attempt to take a person to the ground. They are motivated to move in a circular fashion by use of techniques that create pain, leverage, lead, or any combination thereof. They are forced to spiral downward, "like being driven down a circuitous mountain road", until pinned on the floor. The effect is compelling and is often used as a police arresting technique.

Which Road Leads to Spine Surgery?

ccording to the Mayo Clinic, "back surgery is needed in only a small percentage of patients" and, while "back pain is extremely common...surgery often fails to relieve

When I started my practice 27 years ago, all researchers then agreed spine surgery was over-utilized. Now, it has skyrocketed, including a huge increase in fusions with metallic implants as well as the use of potentially cancer causing agents to speed bone fusions. (See last months piece on this: "Spine Care Crisis: Can YODA Help?")

There is broad consensus that the current growth in healthcare spending is unsustainable and is in fact harming our economy and society at large. Spine care plays a huge role in this, and increased costs' in this area comes from more intensive and more expensive care.

So, what determines whether a patient gets spine surgery?

A recent study found several predictors, a prime one being what doctor is first seen.

Washington state workers with an occupational back injury who saw a surgeon first were more likely to have surgery (42.7 percent) within three years. Those who first saw a chiropractor almost never required surgery (1.5 percent of workers).

Now, workers in Oregon must see a Chiropractor as the only nondrug intervention for first four weeks of care before considering surgery Most have heard the phrase "When

In a quality chiropractic practice, the "tools" are many, and include coaching on diet, movement, breath work, as well as muscle-fascial-spine assessment and treatment.

The word "Doctor" comes from Latin and means "to teach". And that's the purpose of this column: to share safe, effective health approaches that are logical and shown to be true. Have fun and keep it simple.

Dark Skies Spark Oracle Resident's Appreciation – Result: Steward Observatory

hough people living in the clear, dark skies far from city lights have enjoyed their view of the sky in the Oracle area for many centuries, from the Native Americans to the Biosphere 2, one citizen, Lavinia Steward, has left a lasting legacy with a donation to fund the first observatory at the University of Arizona with a "very large" 36-inch telescope.

That donation, just under one hundred years ago, fulfilled the wishes of Director Andrew Ellicott Douglass at the U of A. Since coming to the university in 1906, he had made do with small or borrowed telescopes in less-than-perfect quarters on campus.

Douglass and the University Program

A borrowed 8-inch refractor telescope had given "long and convincing evidence of the advantages of this Southern Arizona location for astronomical work." Not only had it shown the division in the nucleus of Halley's Comet in 1910, but in one of the observing seasons, 72 nights out of 75 were found to be available for work. In the winter of 1913, a series of forty nights in succession showed 36 workable and 26 of extremely fine character. With all these successes, in September of 1914, Douglass advanced a request for the "large telescope."

The new University of Arizona president took the request to the Arizona legislature in early 1915 where, according to Douglass "[the legislature] failed to make the appropriation desired." So, Douglass and the University sought private funds.

The Stewards: Lavinia, Henry and Fred

Meanwhile, Henry and Lavinia Steward with their adopted nephew Fred J. happened to be among those well-do-do people who had moved to Oracle for health and stayed. They first built a small two-storied stucco adobe and used that as a home while building the Steward House by 1895. Both are still standing and are recorded in the Arizona State Historic

Henry Steward, having sold out his oat mill in Joliet, Ohio, could afford this magnificent home — still known in Oracle as the "Steward House" though most recently "Grace Manor." Lavinia lavished her artist skills on the house and garden, as well as continuing her painting (she had been part of an artists' group in Illinois). Fred throve and soon was off to Tucson to pursue a successful business in banking. However, Henry died in 1902 of heart problems.

Lavinia continued to live alone in the house described as "spacious and stately ... with orchard and garden and employee's quarters, ample grounds, and ivied dignity". The house contained notable works of art besides those she had painted herself, many on trips to Mexico.

Douglass declared at the dedication of the observatory: Lavinia Steward was, "A charming and lovely character, deeply interested in the arts and sciences. She had shown the wonders of the heavens to her grand-nephew and nieces. She had planned to do something for the university and felt a personal inclination towards providing some astronomical equipment. Thus all conditions were happily favorable for the beginning of the Steward Observatory."

That bequest —"the princely gift" of $60,000 for building and outfitting the Steward Observatory—came in Oct. 1916.

Unfortunately Steward passed away in Aug. 1917.

The telescope

Douglass had chosen a 26-inch reflecting telescope, a rather new technology, citing "extensive tests made with the great 60-inch telescope on Mount Wilson." Warner & Swayze of Cleveland, Ohio, received the contract for making the telescope structure. However, the mirror was to be made in France, as was usual in 1916-17.

However, WWI delayed the making of the mirror—until The Spencer Lens Company of Buffalo, N. Y. developed the making of optical glass. For most of 1920, Spencer tried their regular glass furnaces without success. Finally, after installing new furnaces, the first all-American telescope became the Steward telescope.

Douglass and two former students had installed the telescope structure at the Steward Observatory building, and the completed glass was received and mounted in July 10, 1922.

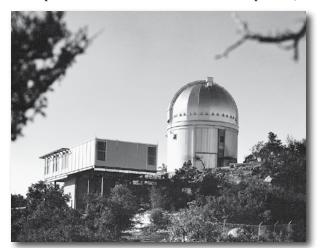

Douglass noted, "It is my deep regret that she did not live to look through this magnificent instrument."

Inset: The value of Lavinia Steward's gift adjusted for inflation would be equivalent to $1,265,660 in 2013 dollars according to Tom Fleming, Steward Observatory.

At the dedication in 1923, Fred Steward presented the "three-inch telescope which had so long been in the home of his aunt" to Douglass. (This writer has not yet discovered what became of that memento. It is reportedly not in the possession of the Steward Observatory.)

The Observatory had been carefully sited on campus, "away from the lights at the main part of the university" on the site of a former ostrich farm, run by the College of Agriculture. Douglass thought, "The real advantage of the site" [where the Observatory still stands] was "the control of lights, a feature most essential to the success of the observatory."

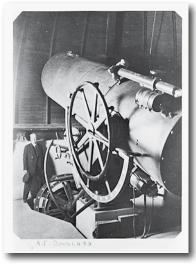

However problems with extraneous lights began to arise before the observatory could be built. According to Douglass "If there had been no war [WWI], the Observatory would have been completed in 1918 or 1919. As it was, the glass for the telescope could not be manufactured in France as planned, so it had to be done in the United States - by Warner and Swazev Company of Cleveland, Ohio, who had contracted to do the casing. As Douglass recounted in 1917, "The area chosen contained practically no houses nearby to the east or north, but ...[by 1923] this part of the city has grown rapidly. The city council, however, has expressed the wish the greatest offender." However, the university itself was to become an offender when the tennis courts, always near the observatory, were given permission to add lights.

Lights cause removal to Kitt Peak

By 1963, the Steward Observatory's once solitary, dark-sky setting had been encroached upon by an expanding Tucson and an expanding campus necessitating a move to Kitt Peak—now the site of most of University of Arizona astronomy, along with much international work. The Steward Observatory's original, "Steward" telescope was removed from that dome for relocation; a smaller telescope was installed for student use. Since 1982, the telescope has been used by the Space Watch Project: "Once at Kitt Peak, the telescope began its new uses. After 1980, the director of the Steward Observatory granted the Spacewatch Project—a group at the University of Arizona's Lunar and Planetary Laboratory-exclusive access to the telescope on the condition that Spacewatch take on all the tasks of refurbishing the telescope and performing all maintenance." The primary goal of Spacewatch is to explore the various populations of small objects in the solar system, and study the statistics of asteroids and comets in order to investigate the dynamical evolution of the solar system. Spacewatch also finds potential targets for interplanetary spacecraft missions, provides followup astrometry of such targets, and finds objects

Thus, the interest in dark skies begun by an artist and humanitarian in Oracle, became the catalyst for the University of Arizona's internationally renowned astronomical studies. Keeping Cool During the Hot Summer Months ummertime in the desert can be brutal if not prepared for it. The hot sun and relentless heat can sneak up on you, and cause harmful effects - even fatal ones.

Pinal County, along with the other four centrally located counties in Arizona: Gila, Graham, Maricopa and Yavapai, have the highest number of heat-related incidents each year during the summer months, May through September. In 2012, there were 1,572 emergency room visits and 212 hospital admissions for excessive heat illnesses in Arizona. The populations at greatest risk for heat-related illnesses are the elderly, over 65 years of age; infants, four years and under; overweight or obese individuals; and, those who do outdoor labor.

According to the Arizona Department of Health Services. though, the population most at-risk for emergency room visits and fatalities are the elderly population. Between 2000-2012, one out of every two Arizona residents who either died or showed up in emergency rooms for heat illnesses was older than 54 years.

Children are also very vulnerable to heat illness, especially when car travel is involved. According to the Safe Kids Worldwide Organization, heatstroke is the leading cause of non-crash, vehicle-related deaths for children under the age of four. On average, every 10 days a child dies from heat stroke in a vehicle, or about 40 children a year.

The majority of heat-induced stress in Arizona usually occurs during outdoor activities. Help protect yourself and your family from heat/sunstroke and dehydration this summer, with some basic precautionary measures:

Drink water. Individuals who are outdoors in the summer heat should drink one to two liters of water, and those doing strenuous activity should drink up to four liters. Avoid coffee or alcohol, which will rehydrate vou.

Protect your skin. Always wear sunscreen if you will be out from under the sun for more than 20 minutes. Wear lightweight, light-

Take it slow. Try to keep strenuous activity during the cool morning times (between 4 a.m. - 7 a.m.). If you are doing hard labor during the hottest times of the day, take frequent breaks in a shaded place to cool down.

Eat more, eat less. Eat smaller meals, more often, throughout the day. This keeps your energy up, but does not overwork your body. It's advised to especially avoid protein (meat, seafood, eggs, dairy, beans) which can raise your body temperature as you digest it.

Here are some additional Child Car Safety Tips to ensure your child stays out of harm's way when the mercury is high:

- Never leave your child alone in a car. Ever. A car heats up twice as hot as the outside temperature, and is not safe for young children.
- Make sure to lock your vehicle, including doors and trunk, when you're not using it to ensure that your child does not get into the car when you are not around. Keep keys and remote entry fobs out of children's sight and reach
- Teach kids that trunks are for transporting items, not people, and are not safe places to play.
- Create reminders for yourself to take your child with you when you get out of the car by putting a personal item such as a briefcase or purse in the backseat next to them. This is especially helpful if you are not following your regular daily routine.
- If you ever see another child alone in a car, immediately call 911. You may save a life.

When Geronimo robbed the Bisbee Stage, Part 2

By John Hernandez Pinal Nugget

The Bisbee stage was robbed in June 1891 by two Mexicans wearing bandanas covering the lower half of their faces. It was the first time the Bisbee stagecoach had been robbed in five years. The newspapers pointed out that it was the first stage robbery since the hangings of the six men involved in the Bisbee massacre. The Bisbee Stage was on its way to Tombstone when the two Mexicans rode up behind the stage as it had slowed down coming out of a canyon trail. One of the Mexicans pointed his gun at the stage driver L.A. Engle and ordered him to stop the stage. A woman named Eva Stanley was sitting next to him. The other Mexican had his weapon pointed at the passenger Dan Simon inside the stagecoach.

The Mexicans ordered the men to empty their pockets. Engle, who was the owner of the Bisbee Stage, turned over $42 and his watch while Simon only had 50 cents on him. The Mexicans did not bother Eva Stanley. It turned out that she had more money on her than was stolen. A trunk with some clothes in it was also taken. Engle was ordered to drive off while the Mexicans pointed their guns at him, when the stage got out of range, the two robbers headed in the opposite direction. Some other stage coaches were robbed reportedly by Mexicans in the weeks preceding the Bisbee stage robbery, one was near Florence and one in Bowie. In April and May a stage was robbed at Ft. Thomas and Casa Grande. Geronimo was a suspect in these robberies.

A week later Sheriff Kelton received a dispatch in Tombstone from his Deputy A.N. Gray at Benson. The message read, "Geronimo was killed about 30 miles from here vesterday. I have his body on ice. One other man was wounded. Can you send anyone to identify

The end for Geronimo Miranda came not from the lawmen that had pursued him over the years but at the hands of some San Pedro Valley ranchers. Geronimo and two members of his gang Victoriano Sandoval and Guadalupe Redondo had stolen a saddle and bridle from the Sanford Ranch on the San Pedro. They later stole two horses as they made their way down the San Pedro below Benson, D.H. Logan at Pantano took up their trail. Along the way he was joined by W. F. Hughes, Chino Orosco and W.H. Gibson. All of these men owned places in the San Pedro Valley. Further down the trail they stopped at two ranches and Sam Bohn and Sam Morgan joined their posse.

The ranchers followed Geronimo and his men for about 30 miles before catching up to them. Hughes yelled in Spanish for them to halt. One of the Mexicans stopped and turned around. Geronimo and Redondo spurred their horses while pulling their pistols and firing on the posse as they attempted to flee. The cowboys were armed with Winchester rifles and returned fire. Geronimo rode about 250 yards before falling off his horse. Redondo continued down the road firing his pistol at the approaching posse. He attempted to jump an irrigation ditch with his horse but his horse stumbled and got bogged down in the water and mud. Redondo fled into the bushes and fired more shots at the ranchers. He would be caught later by a rancher named George Wilson and some other cowboys that had heard that horse thieves were in the area. Redondo had been slightly wounded during the first exchange of fire. Sandoval was the one that had halted when Hughes yelled. He did not fire his weapon and surrendered.

Victoriano Sandoval confessed that he and Geronimo had robbed the Bisbee stage. He said that after the robbery they had headed to Nogales. They were headed to Mammoth along the San Pedro when the ranchers caught up to them. Along the way they had come across a Chinaman and robbed him. They were headed to Mammoth to meet up with some Mexicans coming from Globe. They were planning to rob a store in Mammoth together. Sandoval had once worked for Sheriff John Slaughter as a deputy and had been assigned to track Geronimo Miranda at one time.

Burt Alvord went to Benson and identified Geronimo's body. Alvord would later become an outlaw himself and become involved in a train robbery. John Slaughter also came to see the man that had murdered his deputy Cesario Lucero. The newspapers said that Slaughter "Was pleased to hear of the death of the worst character in the county during his time of office." Slaughter was probably relieved as it was reported that Geronimo had sworn to kill Slaughter. Slaughter also identified Geronimo and pointed out the scars on his body caused by buckshot from his shotgun down in Charleston. Geronimo, the man that had robbed numerous stage coaches, the Agua Zarca train and killed men in Sonora and Arizona was now gone. He had met his fate along the San Pedro.
