Hayden Council terminates police officer

By Mila Besich-Lira
Copper Basin News

A Hayden Police Officer earlier this month was terminated by the Hayden Town Council following a 30-minute executive (secret) session.

The council met with Officer Ray Van Buskirk, Town Attorney Steven Cooper and Police Chief Louie Tartaglia during the executive session and after resuming open meeting, held a brief open discussion and voted to terminate Van Buskirk. Van Buskirk was still on probation with the department.

A second executive session was held for a discussion of legal matters and consultation with Town Attorney, Town Staff and the council, concerning S.G. Gillen vs. Town of Hayden, (Public Records Litigation). There was no action or discussion taken by the council following the executive session regarding S.G. Gillen. Gillen is the former Hayden Police Chief.

In other business, the Council approved a contract between the Town of Hayden and the Pinal/Gila Council for Senior Citizens (PGCSC) in the amount of $124,016. The Council will hear a presentation from PGCSC at a future meeting as there are some questions on an upcoming amended contract. PGCSC is the non-profit agency that allocates the federal and state dollars received for senior services.

The Council also voted to purchase a used engine for the 2008 Nissan Sentra in the amount of $4,204. The engine will be purchased from Horne Motors in Globe.

ASARCO plans $100 million upgrade of Hayden smelter to meet new EPA sulfur dioxide emission limits

Project not expected to disrupt operation of plant or employees' hours

By James J. Hodl
Copper Area News

Plans for a $110 million upgrade of the Hayden copper smelter that will bring the apparatus in compliance with new federal regulations concerning emissions of sulfur dioxide (SO₂) have been filed by owner ASARCO/Grupo Mexico with the Arizona Department of Environmental Quality (ADEQ).

The rules issued by the US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) require that SO₂ emissions from the smelter be reduced from 140 ppb (parts per billion) to 75 ppb during a 24-hour period. The Hayden smelter has until Oct. 3, 2018 to meet this standard.

Meeting the standard is important to keep the Hayden copper smelting plant operating and providing employment for residents of the Hayden/Winkelman area.

To meet EPA's goal, the plan ASARCO filed on June 24 with ADEQ describes a converter retrofit project that will replace the smelter's five current 13-ft. diameter converters with three 15-ft. diameter converters. Also included in the plan are the installation of improved primary and secondary hoods, and an electrostatic precipitator for solids removal prior to SO₂ recapture at the smelter's existing acid plants. Larger ladles (300 cu. ft. instead of 200 cu. ft.) will be installed to reduce the number of hot metal transfers. Additional upgrades will capture secondary gases and direct them to the acid plant for conversion to a sulfuric acid product.

Overall the plan aims to reduce SO₂ emissions at the Hayden smelter by 85 percent, with a total SO₂ capture rate of 99.7 percent of what is produced during the copper smelting process.

The plans were made public during a meeting of the Arizona House Committee on Energy, Environment and Natural Resources held Aug. 22 at the Gila Community College Pueblo Campus in Globe.

ADEQ is expected to rule on the ARARCO plan by late September. If approved the plan will then go to EPA for an additional 45-day comment period. With EPA approval, ASARCO could begin work on the upgrades before year's end.

Work on the converter retrofit will be performed as to not disrupt the operation of the smelter and keep all employees working their regular daily schedules, said Krishna Parameswaran, director of environmental services and compliance assurances at ASARCO. The smelting plant must operate within the EPA emission limits by Oct. 3, 2018.

The smelter and surrounding operations are an important parts of the Hayden economy. It employs 1,400 hourly and salaried workers, who are annually paid $140.8 million in wages, salaries and fringe benefits. The operations also generate $28.6 million in property, severance and sales taxes. The company annually generates spending of $345.8 million on materials, fuel and supplies into the Arizona economy.

Each year the Hayden smelter produces more than 300 million tons of copper that is important in all electrical products, electronic equipment, and even bringing electricity to homes, according to Kelly Norton, president of the Arizona Mining Association. The smelter also products more than 575,000 short tons of sulfuric acid each year.

Although originally built in 1912, the Hayden smelter has been expanded and upgraded on a regular basis, with the last major renovations taking place in 1989 and 1996. In 2012, ASARCO voluntarily undertook a $10 million project to reduce lead emissions through the addition of a monitor system to keep lead emissions within EPA rules issued in 2008 that trimmed allowable emission levels to one-tenth of the former standard.

The EPA-required Hayden smelter renovation projects comes only a step behind a more expensive project for the smelter in Miami owned by Freeport-McMoRan. Budgeted at $450 million, the Miami smelter will receive new converter mouth covers, converter aisle canopies hoods and aisle scrubbers, an anode plant bag house and a smelter furnace upgrade to meet EPA SO₂ emission limits.

Freeport-McMoRan received its permit on July 21 and has begun renovation work that could be completed by the end of 2017. The Miami smelter, which was originally built in 1915, also has undergone numerous upgrades, expansions and renovations in the interim.

Norton emphasized at the meeting that copper smelting is an important contributor to the Arizona economy. At present there are only three copper smelting plants in the US and two are in Arizona (Hayden and Miami). The third is in Salt Lake County, UT, Norton noted.

EPA proposal could have disruptive effect of flow of electricity, state House committee told

Move to limit CO2 emissions would shift electricity generation from coal to gas-fired plants

By James J. Hodl
Copper Area News

Federal rules proposed to substantially improve air quality nationwide could have a negative effect on the health of Arizona citizens and the state economy, according to testimony at a public meeting of the Arizona House Committee on Energy, Environment and Natural Resources held on August 22 in Globe.

A plan proposed in June by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) sets a national goal of reducing emissions of carbon dioxide (CO2). These trims will be based on the emission levels of these gases in 2005 and states will be required to decide how to make these trims based on individual goals EPA will set for each state.

While the EPA proposal is still in the comment period until October 16 and a final rule is not expected until June 2, 2015, based on the proposed rule, Arizona will have the second highest goal to meet in the country. And that, according to Beth Hager, director of public affairs with the Arizona Department of Environmental Quality (ADEQ), could result in a major shift in how electricity is generated and distributed throughout the state, especially in the Phoenix metropolitan area.

The result could be, especially during the transition period, a less certain flow of electricity for air conditioning in summer, which could negatively impact the health of people and stifle the current growth of the Arizona economy, she said.

In her testimony at the Committee meeting, Hager noted that Arizona would have to trim its CO2 output by 52% by 2030, which is exceeded only by the 54% required for Washington State. The goal excludes the Navajo Generating Station, which EPA will deal with separately.

“Based on the proposed rules, Arizona will have to reduce its carbon intensity of 702 lbs/MWh by 2030, and that could require a major shift in the mix of existing power sources,” Hager said. “A substantial percentage of Arizona electricity is generated by burning fossil fuels.

“Achieving the EPA goals would require a huge shift from coal-fired to natural gas-fired generation to meet interim and final goals. The state also would have to beef up generation from low-emitting power sources like solar, wind and nuclear power. Additional trims in CO2 emissions would come from improved energy efficiency of homes and businesses, and reduced energy demand. And EPA will require states to meet 77% of their goals by 2020,” she added.

A shift from coal-fired to natural gas-fired generation also would greatly alter electricity transmission patterns, added John Lesueur, assistant director of the Utilities Division of the Arizona Corporation Commission.

Much of the coal-fired generation is located in the eastern part of Arizona while much of the natural gas-fired generation is in the west, primarily due to independent firms building gas generation plants to sell electricity to utilities in California when that state permitted merchant competition, he said. As those gas generation plants have had minimal use, it is not known if they can provide the steady flow of electricity Arizona needs especially during summer air conditioning season. The result could be more power interruptions in the East Valley (including sections of Pinal County) as the traditional flow of electricity from east to west is reversed from west to east.

When asked if Arizona could add more nuclear generation capacity to augment the electricity state utilities get from the Palos Verde Plant in Tonopah, Lesueur explained that it takes at least five years to build and get a nuclear plant up and running so it couldn't figure in short-term goals set for 2020.

An additional complaint concerning the possible shift from coal to gas generation, Committee member State Rep. Albert Hale noted that coal mining on Indian reservations is a major source of jobs and income for these people, and thus should be preserved. Arizona's coal-fired generation plants are major customers of reservation mined coal.

Prior to EPA's announcement, Arizona had been making much progress in reducing emissions. Since 2005, the state has already trimmed nitrogen oxide emissions by 50% and SO2 emissions by more than 35%, Hager said. Arizona already generates substantial electricity from solar energy and state utilities are required to generate

Lobos open season in California

By Andrew Luberd
Copper Basin News

The Hayden football team, coming off a 2 – 6 record in 2013, will travel to Winterhaven, CA on Friday to take on the San Pasqual Valley Warriors in the season opener for both teams. The Warriors finished with a 4 – 3 record last season.

The Lobos return eight starters from last year's team – four each on offense and defense. Head coach Matt Waddell expects returning starters Jacob Manriquez, Chris Rabago, and Ezkiel Boltarez to be impact players in 2014.

Waddell has certain expectations for the players in the Lobos program. “(I want them) to become better student’s in the classroom,” he said. “(I expect) them to be very disciplined and respectful to others.”

Working hard on and off the field, refusing to give up, being disciplines, and focusing on their responsibilities on the field will lead to success each week, according to Waddell.

Team Kearny celebrates service to the community

By Mila Besich-Lira
Copper Basin News

Kearny Town Council and staff met last week during their regular meeting. Business on the regular agenda was light, just a quick presentation from a NCS Engineering Services. NCS is an expert in water and waste water system master planning, constructing and funding. While residents were interested in this presentation, many were in attendance to recognize the success of volunteers and town staff for their hard work. The Council recognized the Kearny Elks and Rotary Club for their fundraising efforts in the community. Under the direction of Lt. Blue, (Chief of Police on loan from DPS) many awards and service recognitions were given to employees and volunteers in the public safety departments. The council also approved a request from the family of Molly Fontes to place a plaque in her memory at the teen center which was the old swimming pool. Following these agenda items Town Manager gave a few updates to the council and gave a rousing cheer "Go Team Kearny". The Council held an earlier executive session meeting to conduct interviews for the Chief of Police position. The council did not take action at this time as they needed additional information.

Lora Snow was presented a clock.

Joe Norris received a pocket watch.

Members of the Kearny Elks and Rotary clubs were presented 'Remember Honor of the Fallen' Coin.

EMISSIONS

15% of electricity from renewable sources by 2025.

To draft Arizona’s plan to meet the proposed EPA rules, ADEQ is working with utilities and other stakeholders, she noted. ADEQ also is drafting comments on the EPA plan to submit before October 16 explaining the unique circumstances of Arizona’s climate that might make the planned emission trims unreachable.

And ADEQ is exploring the possibility of filing a lawsuit – alone or with other states – to challenge EPA authority to set CO2 emission reduction goals, arguing that the Clean Air Act only empowers EPA to set procedures for reducing emissions, not goals. Several attendees of the meeting, including Andy Tobin, current Arizona House Speaker and candidate for U.S. Congress in the 1st Arizona District; and Gila County Supervisor Mike Pastor, both urged ADEQ to proceed with the lawsuit.
