SUSD board extends online learning until Oct. 12

On Sept. 2 at its regular meeting, the Superior Unified School District Governing Board voted to extend remote-learning until Oct. 12. This means the teachers will continue to run their classes using Microsoft Teams as well as School PLP.

The District will also continue to provide an on-site learning option while using the remote-learning platform. The Board also adopted the benchmarks as a guide to determine in-person learning.

Pinal County Health Services reports COVID-19 benchmarks for Districts each week. Using the colors red, yellow, and green the benchmarks look at the number of cases per 100,000, the percentage of positive cases, and the percentage of COVID-like illnesses.

"All of our staff want our kids back at school but we want to be at an area that allows us to do so," said Superintendent Steve Estatico. "Being 'green' in all three categories will allow us to begin in-person learning at some level."

The Board also voted to allow the Superior High School Athletics Teams to participate in the fall sports season. The Arizona Interscholastic Association (AIA) had voted to proceed with fall sports activities using the same COVID benchmarks as well as specific guidelines to be implemented for each sport.

"We want to give our student-athletes a chance to compete but only if the benchmarks allow us to do so," Estatico said. "We are satisfied with the guidelines that the AIA established. Again, we will need to be in the 'green' in order to actually compete with other schools."

Estatico said that in order for the District to get to "green" and stay "green" it will need help from the Superior Community.

"Please keep wearing your mask in public, practice social-distancing and wash your hands," he requested.

Rebuild Superior plans community garden

Gardening is scientifically proven to be good for us. To speak of it in that frame of mind, there would be mention of cortisol, stress reduction, training one's mind to pay attention and other such, which cannot and should not be discounted as truths. All it takes is a quick Google search to find a plethora of information on the well-studied and proven benefits of gardening.

According to emerald insight, studies which evaluated the benefits of gardening-based interventions for adults who are experiencing mental health issues showed reduced symptoms of both anxiety and depression. While Rasmussen College offers a list of '7 Practical perks of gardening with kids', which includes the fact that, when it comes to healthy eating, '... the positive effect a sun-warmed strawberry has on your little ones will continue to ripple through their lives.'

Gardening is a touchstone to history, in most cultures and all countries, for both health and beauty. During both World Wars, the Western World gardened for the sake of feeding families, supporting troops and to feed the needy. The largest war garden in the United States of America was created in the Copper Corridor. In gardening, there can be thrifty household management, patriotic duty, State pride, entertainment, nobility and charity. These are also truths.

All these are good reasons to garden, and worthy of looking into and considering. Yet they are, in the majority, reasons based on cold fact and public duty and do not speak to the reasons why gardening lessens stress and does so much good in the very immediate acts of engaging in it.

Gardening is primal. It is nature. It is a gentle, relaxing, meditative assault on our senses. It is sight, sound, touch, smell, thinking ability, hunting, gathering, engaging in the knowing of our secret selves, reaching out to God in thankfulness and sharing our lives with others.

We are made to touch the earth, to feel the plants. We are meant to smell well-watered earth and plants throbbing with burgeoning life. They need us. We need them. This is who we are as a species. It doesn't matter what color we are, and it certainly doesn't matter what color they are. We literally breathe for plants and they return the favor. All of us.

It doesn't matter if you are conscious of this need, in the here and now. Nor does it matter if you only want to garden out of loneliness or to be fed. Any reason that gets your hands into the earth is a good reason to start. Once you begin, you will reap the benefits, from brain, to nerves, from spine to toe and sole to soul.

Would you like to take your part in this natural, nourishing activity? Join in and be a part of a community garden in Superior, taking your place in the community and in history, like so many have before you.

Rebuild Superior is heading up a community garden project and is looking for volunteers to help get it set up. There will be assembling of the garden beds, making steps from railroad ties leading down a slope in the yard, filling the beds with organic soil, and planting and reaping the benefits from the garden. They have the materials ready. What they need is you!

Rebuild Superior, Inc. is an all volunteer organization designed to help the community. The produce from the garden will be shared by the people who work on it. It's a great way to be involved in the community and to get fresh food, all in one.

For more information on joining this project, call Leanne Taylor at 520-342-7307. She'll call you back so can explore the possibilities.

Nothing will stop Phoenix couple from celebrating their 70th anniversary

Back about five minutes ago in the early spring of the year 1949, when bright, young, energetic, 20-year-old Jim Karam was singing a romantic ballad at a Maharajan in Phoenix and looking out over the room, his eyes landed on, to use his words, “the most beautiful girl I’d ever seen. More beautiful than Sophia Lauren. Still, to this day.”

This romantic vocalist and the 18-year-old beauty who captured his fancy are my mom and dad. The elusive, smart and witty unsuspecting charmer sitting in the audience and enjoying the performance that night was Dorothy Nader, who was attending the Syrian-Lebanese Society’s festive annual affair. She had come with her older sister and best pal, Margo, both of whom had recently relocated to Arizona from their hometown, Detroit, Michigan, with their parents, Nadima and George Abdo Nader.

It would be almost a year following this memorable evening before Jim and Dorothy saw each other again—the occasion this time: A New Year’s Eve gala on Camelback Road. Fortunately for Jim, Dorothy’s date that night was mostly absent—he was in charge of organizing the evening’s festivities, which gave this poor hardworker’s enterprising rival (my gets-what-he-wants dad) plenty of time to display his plumage to his beguiling soon-to-be bride. If you ask Jim, here’s how he says things started out:

“When I asked your mother for her number, she instructed me get it from her sister. Your mother was a stuck-up. But, Margo didn’t hesitate. She gave me the number right away. She knew I was a ‘catch.’” And the truth is, he was. My dad was—sorry, is!—tall and good looking, with a big heart and a generous spirit. A real gentleman who had to develop the skill of getting along with others as he was the middle-child of 10 Arizona-born offspring of the James Senior and Angelina Karam big, busy, well respected family.

Dorothy’s memory of the first spark differs, though. “Your father never gets the story right,” she says. “I told him, ‘If you want my number so badly, then go look it up.’ And you know your dad,” she proudly continues, “he went to find a phone book, came back immediately, then rattled off my number to me.” She remembers the moment with a smile—yeah, Jim was right, one that Sophia Loren could never equal.

So, on that nostalgic night, Dorothy ditched her unlucky other admirer. A twinge of guilt still lingers when she recounts this part of the story; however, she never for one second regrets the decision she made to spend the rest of the night on the dance floor with her new paramour as they waltzed, jitterbugged, fox-trotted and rhumbaed into the new year and then into their future...

...even though the poor bastard she ditched turned out to be the aviator Howard Hughes. No, just kidding. But I know she’d still have regrets, even if he was! Anyway...

...at the time, Jim was helping his dad run the family dry goods business, “Karam’s,” in the small mining town of Superior, Arizona. Undaunted, Jim made the 120-mile roundtrip every weekend to see his Valley of the Sun sweetheart, a courtship cut short when Jim was drafted into the Army. Under these challenging circumstances, they moved the wedding date up and got married before the groom headed valiantly off to Germany, where he would be stationed for two years, quickly moving up the ranks, undoubtedly, to Sergeant First Class.

Upon Sgt. Karam’s return from Frankfurt, the couple picked up their dancing shoes and made Superior their home, where they built a thriving business, “Karam’s Department Store,” and raised their three pain-in-the-ass children: Cheryl, a nurse practitioner at Maricopa County Hospital; Jim, who has enjoyed a long career in financial management; and me, a busy standup comedian and T.V. performer in L.A. (And I’ll be honest, I do enjoy knowing that nobody can accuse me of exaggerating when I say about the entire family that we are all truly...Superior!)

Anyway, the couple maintained an active social life, dancing in the halls and ballrooms of Superior—there’s that word again!—and the entire state. They took in much of the whole country, in fact. Throughout their marriage, they traveled extensively and continue to get around to this day—pre-covid anyway—a regular highlight being meet-ups that includes lots of dancing with good friends at the Elks Club in Phoenix (where Jim, not so incidentally, has held the position of Grand Exalted Ruler) two or three nights every week.

In any case, even while busy full-time raising a family and dancing with his wife, Jim continued to sing, host, emcee, organize events, volunteer and help the community. He was District Administrator of Little League Baseball for 25 years, voted into office as member of Pinal County Community College District Governing Board, and elected to three four-year terms as member and Chairman of the Pinal County Board of Supervisors. He’s always been a family man, a pillar of the community, while Dorothy, who never wanted any of the limelight, rode shotgun all the way. Which, his kids will tell you, explains why his answer whenever they pose a question to him, any question, is always, “Ask your mother.”

Earlier this year, in February, we celebrated Jim’s 92nd birthday. On hand were his two daughters, granddaughter, Alesia and great-grandson, Ashton, along with, via Facetime from California, Jim III, daughter-in-law, Karen, and their three children; Baileigh, True and Bella. Not present, however, was Brooks John, Jim and Dorothy’s new great-grandson: coming soon in November! Anyway, a special request Jim made to the band at the end of the night, Jim’s present to himself, was the perfectly named tune “Unforgettable” that he danced to unforgettably with his unforgettable bride.

September 10th will mark the 70th anniversary of Jim and Dorothy Karam. The last big anniversary party was held at the Elks for their 50th. This year, the loving couple planned to renew their vows with their dear friends and family on hand from out of town, but, due to covid, that happy scenario will be postponed for now. But only for now.

They’re making the best of the stay-at-home situation, though—they sleep in, whipping up a breakfast of eggs, oatmeal and of course fruit, then reading the Arizona

Republic “cover to cover,” as Jim puts it. What generally follows is an afternoon nap, some exercise (mostly indoors now with the heat!), then a refreshing shower. Covid has not interrupted Jim’s daily routine of visiting his grandson Ashton and the family dog Sosh, who conveniently live two doors down, along with Alesia and Cheryl. They make or pick up dinner for their grandson, they may have a little happy hour with cocktails, chips and salsa...peppered of course with lots of passionate opinions.

High school fall sports season starts but will it finish?

By Andrew Luberda
Copper Area News

The Executive Board of the Arizona Interscholastic Association voted last Wednesday to endorse guidelines proposed by its Sports Medicine Advisory Committee (SMAC) for a safe return to sport and activity. As a result, the AIA fall sports season will continue as scheduled.

However, the question remains: Will it finish?

Football, the last fall sport to begin, started practice on Monday, with games scheduled to commence Sept. 30 – Oct. 2. The sport of golf has begun competition. Cross country, swimming & diving, badminton, fall soccer and volleyball have started practice and tryouts.

“I would like to say on behalf of the staff and the Sports Medicine Advisory Committee, especially for the sport of football, we would not have been able to make this decision until this time right now based on the metrics,” AIA Executive Director David Hines said in a statement. “So, the metrics have gotten to a place that we can start football practice. That we can start the heat acclimatization (guidelines). That we can get kids in a helmet and shoulder pads and begin doing work.”

Some teams across the state have already decided not to conduct a fall sports season, including Ray High School in Kearny, while others are still unsure if or when they will proceed. The AIA has stated “schools playing football will have the option of beginning practice on Labor Day, which is Sept. 7 with any date after that permissible.”

“Per our athletic director and superintendent, we’re going to push back the start of practice for two weeks,” Hayden football head coach John Estrada told Copper Area News. “The reason for pushing that back is because our area is still in the red per the health department. If things change in two weeks and we get put in the green, then I believe they’ll give us the ok to start practice. If things don’t change, I’m afraid our season may be cancelled.”

Superior High School returned to the practice field after suspending activities a few weeks ago.

“The SUSD school board voted last Wednesday, 5-0, for the return of high school fall sports,” Panthers football head coach Ryan Palmer said in an email to Copper Area News. “Programs will be following the AIA guidelines and health metrics for a phased return to practice, and hopefully competition.

“I think that the guidelines, established by doctors and health officials, promote the safety of students, staff, and their families. Although nothing is ever guaranteed, I believe that by following the guidelines, we can return to sports safely. It will take a diligent effort from all involved, to make smart, safe choices, to successfully execute the season.”

Starting practice, especially in team sports where socially distancing is nearly impossible, including football, volleyball, and soccer, is a positive step. The proposed

It's practice only right now for the Superior Panthers. Whether they will compete or not is still in question.

Arboretum staff saves baby coyote

Recent fires and lack of rain have affected the lives of the birds and animals that live in the forest surrounding Superior. Naturally, the Boyce Thompson Arboretum serves as a respite for these animals and the staff and guests often find a variety of animals and birds who visit the Arboretum to find food and shelter.

On Friday morning, Arboretum staff found an injured coyote that had been hit by a car on US Hwy. 60 near the Arboretum. The Arboretum staff was able to bring the injured animal to safety and call Southwest Conservation Center in the Valley. Southwest Conservation Center reported back to the Arboretum that this female Coyote will make a full recovery and once her legs are healed she will be released back into the wild.

Plan your trip to the Arboretum to have a save and socially distant place to recreate. The Arboretum will also be celebrating the grand opening of the Wallace Garden in October. Learn more about how to book your tour of the garden online: <http://bit.ly/WallaceGarden>. There are also several different membership packages available inquire online at: <https://www.btarboretum.org>

She doesn't have a name, but we're thinking it should be 'Lucky Lucy'. This little coyote was rescued by Arboretum staff.

Evenings end generally in matching recliners, watching the news—and then, for relief, favorite comedies like Seinfeld and lighthearted reruns of Green Acres or Hogan's Heroes, depending on who's in control of the remote. And this laughter is no insignificant matter: a key to Jim and Dorothy's blessing of continued vitality and good health is unquestionably their commitment to staying positive. As Dorothy makes clear, "We never go to bed without watching something funny." So there it is—the answer to everything!

Meantime, Jim is busy working on his book, the history of his life in Arizona, while Dorothy writes down funny ideas that occur to her throughout the day and shares them with me. "Once this is all over, and you can get back up on stage, you'll have a lot of new material!" Dorothy promises. She and Jim both, as usual, continue to chart their course together, maintaining their positive attitude during the pandemic. The partnership through thick and through thin remains exemplary and strong. The lovebirds can't wait to get back on the dance floor. "Unforgettable"—yup, perfect. That's what they are. # FALL SPORTS guidelines to continue toward game competition between teams remain a challenge.

The following county-specific benchmarks, as published on the Arizona Department of Health Services (ADHS) website, allow for the start of practice:

1. Two weeks below 100 cases per 100,000 OR two-week decline in the number of new cases (not including current week).
2. Two weeks with percent positivity below 7% (not including current week).
3. Two weeks with hospital visits due to COVID-like illness below 10%.

The benchmarks to begin game competition must reach another phase, considering the SMAC guidelines assess the risk of COVID-19 spread in athletic sports settings. According to the 19-page document, the risk is expected to be increased during team-based practice, more risk within-team competition, even more risk when full competition between teams from the same local geographic area, and the highest risk during full competition between teams from different geographic areas.

Modifications previously released by the AIA that address such game logistics of eliminating postgame handshakes, equipment sanitizing, and more aim to reduce risks, however, they don't affect the benchmarks defined by the ADHS nor the SMAC guidelines to begin game competition.

Currently, most communities are considered in the "Moderate Community Spread" category of the SMAC guidelines, which allows larger team sports and contact sports to consider non-contact team practice with cohorts at least six feet from other cohorts at practice and the following:

- Outside practice encouraged when possible
- Maintain healthy operations and healthy environment guidelines shall be followed at all times
- Athletes shall be kept in the same training group (cohorting)
- Athletes should have their own equipment (i.e. helmets)
- Training drills with shared equipment may occur (i.e. sleds)
- Cleaning and disinfecting schedule in place
- Minimum cleaning before and after each cohort, but preferred before and after each athlete
- No close contact drills between players
- No competitions
- All coaches and staff should wear masks at all times

For competition to commence between teams, communities must reach a level of "minimal community spread" defined as:

1. <10 cases/100,000
2. <5% of COVID-19 PCR tests performed are positive
3. <5% of hospital visits due to COVID-like illness

If and when that level is reached, "all sports, with and without contact, may resume with usual activity," according to the SMAC guidelines.

Many throughout the state, including coaches, parents, and media wonder if that level is unattainable in the next four weeks or less. Soccer and volleyball are scheduled to begin game competition Sept. 16-21.

The AIA appears to believe that communities will reach the level required to see games under the Friday Night Lights and more.

"To say we are happy to be where we are now is an understatement," Hines said. "The Board members really took their time to make sure that this could be done safely. We think that it definitely can."

With the help of everyone at our member schools doing their part, we can absolutely make this a memorable season."

No doubt, this fall sports season will be remembered but for what?

We are about to find out.

Look to God

In Psalm 118:5-8 we discover: "In my distress I called on the Lord and He answered me. Because He loves me and is with me, what can others do to me? Trusting in the Lord is much better than putting your confidence in mankind."

In the current situation we all find ourselves in, we can easily get a feeling of hopelessness. All that we know and depend on, we now question. We look for a solid base to stand on and believe in.

The best place to look is in your Bible. God's loving grace is like a breath of fresh air for us. His promises are true and will not fail, even in times of disaster and destruction. Know in your heart and mind that He is OUR God

PEOPLE

CREATING JOBS

Resolution Copper is committed to a workforce that reflects the local communities and cultures in which we operate.

In order to fulfill our commitment to hiring qualified candidates locally when we can, Resolution Copper tracks employee residences using zones defined by proximity to the mine.

PROTECTING THE ENVIRONMENT

The remediation work at the old Magma West Plant has been completed and approved by the Arizona Department of Environmental Quality (ADEQ). Soil cleanup began in 2016 and wrapped up earlier this year. Since completion, hydroseeding with a native seed mix has already produced vegetation on the reclaimed mining land.

Reclamation of former Tailings Pond 6 is approximately 75% complete. Capping with clean soils has begun, and the stormwater channels are beginning to take shape. Completion of the reclamation work is on track for this fall. This will finish an effort that took 15 years and roughly $80 million to clean up 230 acres of impacted by historical mining activities.

BUILDING THE LOCAL ECONOMY

Resolution Copper is an exceptional project that is low cost and has a long life. It is expandable and strategically placed to satisfy increasing demand for copper. We use local suppliers and vendors whenever possible.
